IT IS A BOON TO READ. ERS.

We ask every reader to consider the sifer made in our advertising columns of a complete set of the Americanized Encycloredia Britannics for the small sum of $5.00 on delivery of the complete set, and $2.50 a month for ten months. This proposition is made solely on condition of your subscribing to this paper for one year; all our present subscribers are entitled to all the advantages of this offer. Such a proposition was never made by any newspaper before, and the fact that we are able to make it is a striking illustration of the wealth producing progress of the world in this wondrous age of electricity and steam. The cost of producing the encyclopredia has considerably exceeded $1,000,000. That such a work should be placed at the disposal of every resident of this section at a price so small that the saving of eight cents daily for eight months will cover it, and on terms so easy as to involve so inconveniences of economy-this surely is a triumph of modern intelligence and labor combination.

What the Americanized Encyclopsedia Britannica is, however, is a matter as to which information is not generally diffused. The Encyclopædia Britannica is regarded by all students and literary men as the standard reference authority of the English speak ing world. For nearly one hundred and twenty years it has stood at the head of its peculiar class of literature, employing on its nine editions the most celebrated writers of successive generations, and sparing no expense necessary to secure the services of the foremost men in every department of human knowledge. Essays, dissertaions and descriptions by such men as Macaulay, Jeffrey, Leigh Hunt, Faraday, Mill, Tyndall, Huxley, Clifford and Farrar are imbedded in its pages, making it not only an encyclopædia of facts, but a most delightful assortment of literary treasures as well.

This is the work which forms the basis of the Americanized Encyclopsdia Britannica, which is, as its name Imports, the original Britannica remodeled, amended and, where necessary, enlarged to fit it to occupy in American homes the place held by the original work among the people of England. Articles on subjects peculiarly interesting to Americans such as the histories and descriptions of American states and cities, accounts of military operations on American coil, descriptions of peculiarly American industries and institutions-have been entirely rewritten and greatly enlarged, the space alloted to matters uninteresting except to Englishmes being correspondingly reduced. A most complete series of biographies of living persons-of whom no mention is made in the original work, its plan excluding notices of any but the dead -has been added, a number of new maps, including one of every state in the union, have been introduced and the entire work has been corrected to bring it into line with the progress of history and science up to the present year. The net result is a compilation that in interest and reliability surpasses the original Encyclopædia Britannica as far as that monumental work surpasses all others of its kind. It may not be amiss to say here a few words to one of the uses of a work like the Americanized Encyclopedia Britannica, to which many of our readers, perhaps, give little thought. The high price at which the Encyclopædia es and the comp hitherto been offered have resulted in limiting their sale to literary men and comparatively wealthy families, and the effect of this limitation has been that by the great mass of American people an encyclopædia is looked on as work of reference and nothing more: something useful to students. but rarely needed by men of non-proressional vocations. How mistaken this idea is anybody will instantly see who will take the trouble to glance through a volume of the Americanized Encyclopædia Britannica. From and to end it abounds in reading of the most delightful kind-biography, travels, history, narratives of adventure, accounts of strange and distant countries, descriptions of inventions and machinery. There is hardly a page of it that will not hold the mind enchained. The influence of such a literary collection in a family is incalcutable. It sids the education of the young; it expands and strengthens the minds of older people; it fosters a taste for profitable reading and saves the young from one of the greatest dangers of our day—the temptation offered by the thousands of cheap, trashy and corrupting books that deluge our country in a perennial stream A library of reference, a collection of pure and entertaining literature, a vehicle of education and a safeguard against vice - this is what we offer w
